MYTHOLOGICAL BEASTS AND FANTASY CREATURES

Secure • contain • Protect

This book is the result of some research and a creative writing project with grade 6 English Language and Literature students. The students were tasked with researching mythological beasts and fantasy creatures and to present their findings in a creative written format with illustrations.

This is the first stage of a much more ambitious creative writing project.

Happy reading!

DRAGONS

In Western culture people regard dragons as evil monsters, and must be killed. Western dragons are like symbols of the devil and temptation.

Western dragons also represent greedy and cruel. They love gold and jewels and hide them in cave.

In many Western myth and stories, dragons bring trouble to villages, and ending up with killed by hero.

In Western culture, dragons is just a "evil creature" need to be killed by a hero.

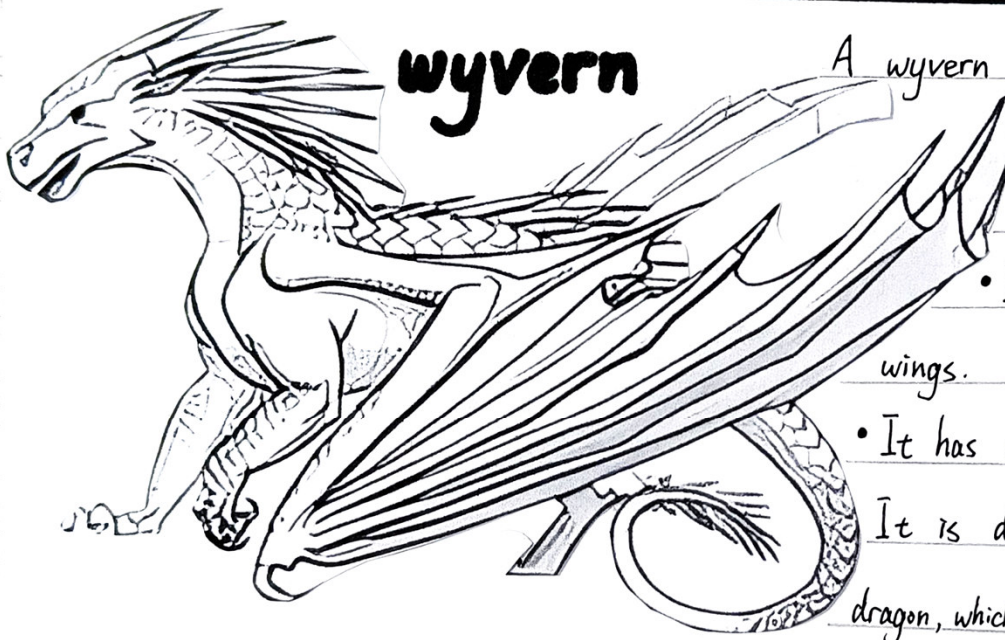

In China, dragon represent a completely opposite thing to Western dragons. They are symbol of luck, power, and good fortune.

Dragons stand for the emperor in ancient china, people in ancient china believed dragons can bring enough rain to make crops grow well.

Chinese people love dragon, so we have Dragon boat festival. In our culture, dragons are symbols of luck and hope, not a "evil monser".

wyvern

A wyvern is a type of dragon from European stories.

It looks like this:

- It has two legs and two wings.

- It has a long, poisonous tail.

It is different from a common dragon, which has four legs. The <sup>2/2</sup> wyvern uses its wings like arms to fly. In stories, it is often shown as a fierce and dangerous creature.

Goat Man:

The Goat Man is a mythical creature that is half-goat and half-human. It emerged in American folklore in the 1950s. Legend says that it has a human-like upper body and a goat-like lower body, with horns and hooves. It is said to live in thick forests and is known for attacking people often without any warning. However, to this day, there is no solid proof that Goat Man really exists.

Pegasus

In Greek mythology, Pegasus are winged horses that was born from the blood of the Gorgon Medusa when she was beheaded by the son of Poseidon Perseus. The Pegasus can move at very fast speeds when it wants to, and are very skilled at flying. They are often depicted as a pristine white horse and is associated with various myths.

The phoenix lives to an Immense age as it can
Regenerate, bursting into flames
When it's body begins to fall
And rising again from the ashes
As a chick.

Phoenixes can provide helpful things such as phoenix tears, they can heal your wound.

PHOENIX

Phoenix

Name: phoenix

Stats: The phoenix is a mythical bird with Golden red feathers and a harmonious voice. It lives for approximately Five centuries. The eyes are always a glittering emerald green and it is very loyal. And every Five centuries, they are reborn and begin a new life, which is immortality. they eat incense, herbs, and perfumed plants.

Traits: kind, loyal, magical, harmonious, & friendly.

Trolls are bad-tempered, ill-mannered, unpleasant creatures, with little intelligence and no personality. They have a fondness for raw flesh and will gladly eat humans.

Trolls are characterised by their large size and prodigious strength. They possess thick skin, often covered in horny growths or "cobbles" which litter the floor of troll caves.

TROLL

Trolls: The Giants of the Mountain

Imagine a creature that is like a part of the wild, ancient mountains themselves. This is a troll. In the old stories from places like Norway and Sweden, trolls are the huge, grumpy, and often not-very-smart giants who live in the deepest, darkest parts of the wilderness.

They aren't just big; they are massive, often as tall as a tree or even a small hill. They are usually very ugly, with long, crooked noses, lumpy skin that looks like mossy stone, and tangled hair. Because they live in caves or under lonely mountains, they don't like people and can be very dangerous if you bother them. They might throw boulders at you or even try to eat you!

Trolls have a very big secret weakness: sunlight. If the rays of the sun ever touch them, they instantly turn into stone. This is why trolls only come out at night, and you can sometimes see what looks like a strangely shaped mountain or a stack of rocks—the old stories say that these are trolls who were caught by the morning sun.

In stories, they represent the wild, scary, and untamed power of nature. They are the force of chaos that heroes must overcome. A famous troll from a very old story is Grendel from "Beowulf," a lonely and angry troll who terrorizes a king's hall. So, in short, trolls are the big, scary, and magical giants of the forest who remind us why it's not always safe to wander into the deep, dark woods alone.

Cerberus is the three-headed hound that guards the entrance to the underworld.

His job is to:

- Stop the dead from leaving.
- Stop the living from entering.

He is a monstrous creature, often shown with snake-like features, such as a tail or mane made of snakes. His most famous myth is his capture by the hero Heracles, who subdued him as one of the twelve labors.

Frankenstein's Creature: The Lonely Giant

Victor Frankenstein wanted to create a beautiful, perfect man, but what he brought to life was something that horrified him. The creature was a giant, much taller and stronger than any normal man, built from parts and pieces other people no longer needed.

His appearance was deeply unsettling. His skin was a sickly, yellowish color, and it was pulled so tightly over his body that you could see the shapes of his muscles and the bones underneath. He had lovely, shiny black hair and perfect white teeth, but this only made the rest of him seem more wrong. His lips were a dark, lifeless black, which created a strange and scary contrast with his pale face.

But the worst part was his eyes. They were watery and pale, almost like a ghost's eyes. They didn't look at you with a normal human feeling; instead, they seemed to glow with a sad, lonely, and empty light. He was like a puzzle where every piece was beautiful on its own, but when they were all forced together, they created a terrifying picture.

This is why everyone who saw him immediately ran away in fear. He was designed to be a man, but he looked like a walking nightmare. More than anything, his story is about this terrible loneliness. He wasn't born evil, but the constant rejection and fear from everyone he met, starting with his own creator, made him bitter and angry. He was a lonely and intelligent being, trapped inside a body that was a horror to behold.
